

MatchWork provide CV matching for Belfast Telegraph

Independent News and Media (Northern Ireland) owners of the Belfast Telegraph , the leading media company in Northern Ireland, has chosen MatchWork to provide a CV matching service for their job board www.nijobfinder.co.uk

In a move to improve their service and enhance the user experience www.nijobfinder.co.uk has launched CV Matching which offers both Jobseekers and Recruiters a highly accurate and time-saving way of finding the perfect match. This new service is being fully integrated with Belfast Telegraph's existing multi platform for recruitment and includes single-sign-on to www.nijobfinder.co.uk so registered users do not have to log on separately.

The CV matching service is unique and matches key structured data from the jobseeker's CV with the key structured data in the job profile. It delivers accurate results quickly and does all the work for both parties with an email notifying the Recruiter and the Jobseeker of the match. The Jobseeker's identity and personal contact details are hidden until the jobseeker chooses to release them.

Sam McIlveen is Digital publisher for Belfast Telegraph and who has overseen the project says; "We are keen to develop our multi-media offering for the recruitment market in Northern Ireland and see CV matching as a high value service to offer recruiters that will help them find the right candidates. At the same time it is a great, free service to jobseekers which saves them time and increases their opportunity to find right job".

MatchWork provide job boards to many media companies across Europe and are the pioneers of CV matching. "We are delighted to be working with Belfast Telegraph, they are the media powerhouse in Northern Ireland and are keen to stretch that lead with CV matching. It is a also an exciting project for MatchWork as we can now showcase how we can add CV matching to established Job boards in a fully integrated way" comments Chris Stanley, MD of MatchWork UK.
